Kia Ora

Tēnā tātou katoa Nau mai, haere mai

On behalf of the organising team it is my pleasure to welcome you to the 2019 IASYM Australasian Conference. I'm sure you will join with me in expressing our thanks to those who have been involved in putting together the various aspects of the conference including: the academic committee who have worked hard to ensure a great spread of input over the conference, the on the ground team who are making sure everything is running smoothly, and of course our presenters who have worked hard in their research and writing for our benefit.

As we gather over the next few days you will hear from a wide variety of research interests and ministry areas. It is so exciting to see the diversity of papers on offer, especially as you consider the impact this research can – and does have – on ministry practice.

So, welcome again, I hope you enjoy both your time at the conference and your time in Auckland city.

It is a real pleasure to have you join with us.

No reira, tēnā koutou katoa.
